

Local police train for terrorist preparedness

● Photos by Anne Litz ●

OCEAN CITY — For five days last week, anti-terrorist tactics instructors from the Department of Homeland Security trained law enforcement officers from local municipalities, the county and state on how to deal with terrorist situations. Seen here last Friday, those officers practice a mock raid against “terrorists” at a former Tyson building located near the intersection of Route 113 and Route 346.

Members of the Ocean City Police Department, the Worcester County Sheriff’s Department, the Maryland State Police and Anne Arundel Police Department cleaned off potentially hazardous agents during their training for anti-terrorist tactical operations with the National Center for Biomedical Research and Training in Ocean City

